

Logo Usage Guide

How to choose a lockup, and how to place it.

— 03 THE LOGO SYSTEM

Eleven approved configurations

Choose by the space available, never by preference. If a lockup is not shown here, it does not exist.

REDUCED MARK

— 04 CLEAR SPACE

The mark needs air, and it needs a floor

X is the height of the lotus, 0.136 of the symbol's height at whatever size the mark is used. One rule for every lockup, so the margin reads as equal across the whole set. For the wordmark alone, X is its cap height.

Nothing may enter this zone: no type, image, rule, or edge of page. Clear space is a minimum, not a target. Where the layout allows, give the mark more.

Never place the logo in a coloured box purely to separate it from a background. Change the colourway instead.

— 04 MINIMUM SIZE

How small the mark may go

Primary lockup
32 mm / 120 px wide

Horizontal
52 mm / 200 px wide

TRIKONAM

Symbol
16 mm / 60 px wide

TRIKONAM

Wordmark
24 mm / 90 px wide

Reduced mark
6 mm / 16 px

Each is shown at its own minimum, in the optical cut it is approved in. Below these, step down to the next lockup: the primary gives way to the horizontal, the horizontal to the symbol, the symbol to the reduced mark.

On uncoated and recycled stock, expect dot gain to close fine apertures. Step up one lockup from the minimum, and proof before committing to a run.

Where the mark may stand

IVORY

SAND

FOREST INK

ESPRESSO

These four are the whole of it. Ivory and Sand take the mark in Forest Ink; Forest Ink and Espresso take it in Ivory.

Over photography, use the white colourway, and only where the image is quiet: an even, unbusy area with no detail running through the mark. If the mark is not clearly legible at a glance, move it, or place it on a plain panel beside the image. Never place it over faces, hands, or the focal point of a posture. Do not add coloured overlays to force the logo to work.
